If not us, then who?

In treatment courts, our roles provide the opportunity for a unique collaboration to effectuate positive change within the criminal justice system.

While prosecutors and defense counsel may disagree on individual participants and legal matters, we have the common goal of ensuring that the treatment court produces the best possible outcomes.

If not us, then who?

The Prosecutor and the Defense Counsel also have the shared goals of reduced recidivism and increased community safety.

Effective collaboration between the prosecutor and the defense counsel is vital for ensuring the treatment court operates effectively, avoids pitfalls, identifies areas needing improvement, and provides equal opportunities to participate.

Target Population

- Examine data of justice population
 - Who's on community supervision?
 - Who's in jail?
 - What offenses, other than drug possession, are being committed because of substance use or mental health issues?
 - Felonies? Misdemeanors? DWIs? Probation Violators?

Are we targeting the population that will generate the greatest impact in our community?

Who are we bringing into our treatment courts?

	High Risk	Low Risk
High Needs (dependent)	Standard Track Accountability, treatment, and habilitation	Treatment Track Treatment and habilitation
Low Needs (abuse)	Supervision Track Accountability and habilitation	Diversion Track Secondary prevention

Target Population

Risk Level

Reminder

“Risk” refers to the likelihood that the offender will not succeed adequately on standard supervision and will continue to engage in the same behavior that got him or her into the trouble in the first place.

*Risk does NOT refer to danger to the community.
Risk levels need to be separated.*

Clinical Need

Reminder

“Need” is whether the client needs treatment and what kind of treatment he/she needs.

The higher the need level, the more intensive the treatment or rehabilitation services should be, and vice versa.

Eight Central Factors of Criminal Behavior

- History of Antisocial Behavior
- History of Antisocial Personality Patterns
- Antisocial Cognitions
- Antisocial Associates

Known as the Big Four. These are most likely to reduce recidivism if directly addressed.

- Family/Marital Circumstances
- School/ Work
- Leisure/Recreation
- Substance Use

Treatment Courts usually focus on these four factors.

Program Structure

- Examine Program Structure
 - Pre-Plea/Diversion
 - Post-Plea
 - Deferred Sentencing
 - Probation
 - Probation Revocation
 - Re-Entry
 - Mixed Models

What's the legal incentive to participate?

Eligibility Criteria

Eligibility Criteria – written and objective characteristics that define who within your offender population may be admitted to treatment court.

- Legal Eligibility
- Risk Level
- Clinical Need

No voting!

Legal Eligibility

- Only Drug Possession Cases?
 - Greater effects with theft and property offenders
 - Often not jail or prison bound
- Dealers?
 - Do just as well in treatment court.
- Violent Offenders?
 - Do just as well in treatment court.

Barring legal prohibitions those charged with dealing or violent histories should not be excluded automatically

Keep in mind....

Prosecutors must accept that defense attorneys will advocate for the admission of probation violators and other aggravating cases with clients who have substantial records.

Defense attorneys must accept that prosecutors may be required to consider the wishes of victims and the community.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS:

Medical Marijuana and Treatment Courts

October 2022

The legalization of medical marijuana raises important questions for treatment courts. To what extent do treatment courts have the authority to restrict a participant's use of medical marijuana? How should treatment courts supervise participants who are permitted to use medical marijuana? This FAQ document explores the legal status of medical marijuana in the United States and the impact of medical marijuana legalization on treatment courts.¹

Marijuana is an illegal drug under federal law. So why is it an issue for treatment courts?

Marijuana is classified as a Schedule I drug under the federal Controlled Substances Act,² meaning it is regarded as having high potential for abuse and no accepted medical use.³ As a result, it is unlawful to possess or use marijuana under federal law.⁴ In 2006, the U.S. Supreme Court confirmed that the Controlled Substances Act prohibits marijuana possession despite state laws to the contrary. The Court expressly concluded that the federal prohibition on marijuana possession contains no exception for the use of medical marijuana in compliance with state laws.⁵

of Justice has declined to enforce the Controlled Substances Act when a person buys, sells, or possesses medical marijuana in accordance with state law.⁶ Since 2014, Congress has reinforced this arrangement by defunding the Department of Justice's prosecution of the exchange of medical marijuana in cases "where it is legal under state law."⁷

In sum, marijuana remains illegal under federal law, but federal authorities forgo prosecution when the use of marijuana is legal under state law. Therefore, treatment courts must consider state law and determine how it affects the rights of participants
